THE
STRANGER'S NEW GUIDE
THROUGH
BOSTON AND VICINITY.

HACKS AND CARRIAGES.

For the information of strangers arriving in Boston, we append below the Municipal Regulations regarding Public Hacks and Carriages, a copy of which is furnished us by the Superintendent of that department in this city, and to which the reader is here referred as the first step towards moving about the metropolis or environs.

CITY OF BOSTON: HACK FARES,

As established by the Board of Aldermen, to take effect
April 1, 1864.

For one or more adult passengers within the City Proper, or from one place to another within the limits of South Boston, or of East Boston FIFTY CENTS each.

Between the hours of 11, P.M., and 7, A.M., the fare for one adult passenger shall be ONE DOLLAR.

For two or more such passengers FIFTY CENTS each.

For one adult passenger from any part of the City Proper to either South Boston or East Boston, or from East Boston or South Boston to the City Proper, ONE DOLLAR.

For two or more such passengers between said points,
SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS each.

For children between four and twelve years of age, when accompanied by an adult, ONE-HALF of the above sums; and for children under four years of age, when accompanied by an adult, NO CHARGE is to be made.

By order of the Board of Aldermen,

S. F. McCLEARY, City Clerk.

March 15, 1864.

BAGGAGE.—One Trunk, a Valise, Box, Bundle, Carpet-Bag Basket, or other article used in travelling, shall be free of charge; but for each additional trunk, or other such articles, FIVE CENTS shall be paid.

Next to the means of conveyance from Depots, comes the necessity of knowing where the stranger may find a convenient resting-place. Most of the leading Hotels in the City, at the present day, have coaches or carriages belonging to their several establishments, which are in attendance, usually, at the stations, on the arrival of cars, &c., in Boston. We give below the names and location of several of the Public Houses in town, some of which we shall have occasion to mention more at length in other portions of the "GUIDE."

THE NEW GUIDE THROUGH BOSTON.

A Starting-Point.

THE casual visitor or temporary sojourner in the METROPOLIS OF NEW ENGLAND, on his arrival in the city, feels the necessity of a HAND-BOOK, or GUIDE, upon reference to which he may be able to learn — however briefly it may be — in what direction to turn his steps to reach the particular location he may have occasion to visit; and it is the aim of this little publication to set forth an accurate general description of the prominent places of interest in and around Boston, the routes leading through the city, and to the towns in the vicinity, with directions pointing to public buildings, popular drives, places of resort, hotels, churches, theatres, &c., &c., the whole being intended to supply, in a concise and cheap form, a want long felt by strangers who visit Boston upon pleasure or business. In order to systematize this information, some central starting-point must be chosen, from which the traveller may readily turn in any desired direction, to “see the sights” of the town, and its neighborhood. The termini of most of the HORSE RAILROADS running through Boston being near the head of Tremont Row, or at the junction of Court Street with Tremont Street and Cornhill, we have chosen our starting-place at the point known as

Scollay's Building.

At this place, the horse-cars from Roxbury, East Boston, South Boston, Charlestown, and Chelsea, — Norfolk House line, Warren Street, Mount Pleasant, Tremont Road, and Oak Street, — arrive and depart every few minutes during the day and evening; and at this general "station" of these roads (the "office" being in the basement of Scollay's Building, east), there is in constant attendance an employé of the roads, who announces from time to time, as they come and go, the direction and place to which each car is destined. This arrangement is an excellent one, and obviates much of the former needful but annoying inquiry as to when and where the cars go to. All that is now necessary for the stranger in Boston to do, who desires to reach either of the points above named, is to find his way to our place of starting — "Scollay's Building" — and from thence, at any hour of the day or evening, he will find conveyance in first-class cars, attended by gentlemanly conductors, over good roads, to his destination, at a cost of a few cents for the trip.

Cornhill.

Few locations in Boston have so many visitors from the country, during the year, as Cornhill. This street runs directly from the north side of Scollay's Building to Dock Square, by the lower end of Washington Street, and is occupied mainly with the publishing houses of the Massachusetts Bible Society, Sunday School Union, New-England Universalist Publishing House, Methodist Book Concern, American Education Society, Home and Foreign Missionary Rooms, Massachusetts Sabbath School and kindred Associations, Religious Newspaper offices, Zion's Herald, Boston Recorder, Congregationalist, numerous Bookstores, Sunday School Depository, Trumpet Office, Rand & Avery's, and other Printing and Publishing Establishments of prominence, while two or three of the most extensive and elegant Furniture Warehouses in town are also found in this thoroughfare. The friends of the Missionary cause, and of Sabbath Schools, Religious Teachers, &c., meet and exchange views at the offices of the institutions above enumerated, and the Cornhill of to-day is one of the leading business quarters of central Boston. From Scollay's Building, if the stranger moves up Tremont Street (south-west), near by, on the left, will be found the

which is filled with an immense collection of curiosities, — animals, birds, fish, reptiles, pictures, statuary, &c., — gathered from all parts of the world, and forming a rare object of interest to the stranger in Boston. There is a performance upon the stage of this establishment, nightly, and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, by a company always of the first class in the profession; and visitors from abroad will always find the MUSEUM a most acceptable place for instruction and amusement. Beyond, — at the corner of Tremont and School Streets, — stands the old gray-stone church, known as

King's Chapel,

Built of "granite," gathered where it could be most conveniently found at the time it was erected (some years before the now famous Quincy quarry was in operation), without regard to color or finish. completed late in the year 1865, and is an ornament to the neighborhood. The interior contains apartments for the Mayor and Aldermen, Common Council, several Court Rooms, and the offices of other city officials, and is a triumph in modern architecture, as well for its classical beauty and economy, as for its convenience and substantial character. Upon the left of the front entrance, on its ornamental pedestal, stands the bronze statue of Franklin, a superior and interesting work of art. Directly opposite City Hall, is the world-famed

Parker House, School Street,

An elegant edifice, of pure white marble, and one of the foremost hotels in this country. The "Parker House" is too well known to need a single word in its commendation. It is conducted upon the European plan, is lavishly furnished, is an establishment of the very first class, in its way, and we simply direct the stranger in Boston where it stands, assured, that, when once he visits this fine house, he will not soon forget its location, or the princely management and hospitality of its long-time conductors. Just below, opposite this house, is Niles' Block, a large and handsome building, containing numerous lawyers' offices. Opposite is a large freestone building, the Boston Five-Cents Savings Bank, one of the most successful Institutions of the kind in the city; and just below, on the same side is the Universalist Church (formerly all things considered, the most perfectly classical building in the city of Boston. It is of dressed granite, chaste and elegant in proportions, beautiful in finish, and massive in exterior. The broad and beautiful malls, on all sides, are most inviting to the pedestrian; and all classes, in summer or winter, here, at will, enjoy the pleasant shadows and invigorating breezes without let or hindrance, so long as they obey the oft-occurring mandate of policeman and sign-board to “KEEP OFF THE GRASS.” Below the “Common,” and fronting upon Charles Street, is laid out, in tasteful style,

Occupying about twenty acres, and very prettily arranged with walks, artificial ponds, parterres of shrubs and flowers, numerous fountains, and a fine conservatory. The Public Garden is a very attractive and pleasant retreat. The distance around its outside lines is four thousand two hundred feet (over three-fourths of a mile); and strangers will find it worth their while to visit it, as well as to enjoy a stroll through the magnificent avenues, and among the superb rows of costly dwellings which flank this handsome spot, southward, upon the newly-made lands of the Commonwealth, formerly the "Back Bay." The fine Stone Church, over which presides the Rev. Dr. Huntington, and the Church of the former "Federal-Street Society," are both conspicuous upon this recently finished part of Boston; and quite in sight is also the spacious Depot of the Providence Railroad Company, corner of Pleasant Street. Recrossing the Garden, towards Tremont, a brief walk brings us to and furnished in the most acceptable style, throughout. The cost of this structure was about a quarter of a million of dollars. It has now been completed and in operation about ten years; and the library contains 125,000 volumes, from which, without charge, one book per day can be had by the residents of Boston, upon complying with the simple "Rules" of the institution. The architecture of the Boston Library is very chaste; and a visit to the building will gratify every lover of the beautiful in art and literature.

The New Masonic Temple, &c.

Leaving the Public Library, and turning to the right we pass the ancient Burial Ground, at the south-easterly corner of the Common, and Hotel Pelham, at the corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets, and reach the site of the late "Winthrop House" (recently destroyed by fire), at the north-easterly corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets. This beautiful location is now owned by the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Masons, upon which is to be erected, at once, a magnificent TEMPLE, to be devoted to the uses of the Grand Lodge, Encampments, Chapters, and Lodges of the Masonic Fraternity of the State; and which, when completed, will be the most superb specimen of architectural beauty and grandeur in this Commonwealth. From this point, proceeding down the easterly mall of the Common, we pass along

Colonnade Row,

A long range of handsome four-story brick dwellings, twenty-four in number (built in 1811), which, in former years, have been the quiet and beautiful homes of many of the wealthy residents of Boston; but which, upon this street, at the present writing, are fast giving way, block by block, to the "march of improvement," and, with the horse-cars in front, and the numerous stores that are now being established here, almost from month to month, this hitherto sedate and handsome neighborhood is being rapidly converted into what, in a few years at farthest, must prove one of the busiest and noisiest thoroughfares in the heart of the city. Approaching the head of Winter Street, we observe

St. Paul's Church,

Facing the Common, between Winter and West Streets. This edifice was finished in 1820, and is built of gray granite, Grecian in style, of the Ionic order. It is 112 feet long, by 72 wide, and about 40 feet high. A handsome columned portico, 32 feet high, graces its front, the pillars being of Potomac sandstone. It is furnished with a fine organ, of superior tone; and beneath its floor are several tombs, so admirably constructed as to obviate all objections to the interring of the dead beneath the church. This is a classical structure that has withstood the test of time, and is still an attractive though rather sombre building, of the very first class of substantial beauty.

Masonic Temple.

Adjoining St. Paul's, stands the handsome granite building known as the old Masonic Temple, built and originally occupied by the Masonic Lodges here; afterwards, for a time, by Jonas Chickering's Piano-forte Rooms; and, at present, by the United-States District Court, and officers for the United-States District of Massachusetts. A substantial edifice, of fine proportions and great beauty.

If, on leaving the Public Garden, we pass up along Beacon Street (or north) mall, on arriving at the upper corner of the Common, we see, upon its elevated eminence, "Beacon Hill," the Massachusetts State-House.

This noble pile can also be reached from Tremont, directly up Park Street. The building faces the Common (eastward), in front of which, right and left, stand the bronze statues of Daniel Webster and Horace Mann. The visitor will greatly enjoy the fine view afforded of the city and its suburbs from the cupola, — a gratification which no stranger should deny himself. In the rotunda, below, are now exhibited hundreds of battle-torn flags, brought back from the fields of recent strife, and which were borne by brave

The Old Hancock Estate.

On the west side of the State-House (Beacon Street), until within a few months, stood the ancient and memorable "Hancock House," a sturdy old stone mansion, formerly owned and occupied by the eminent patriot, JOHN HANCOCK, and afterwards by his heirs. This famous structure has now been demolished; and two splendid brown-stone mansions are erected on the site, at a cost of near half a million of dollars. The place which knew that princely old homestead so long will now know it no more, forever! Leaving the State-House, and passing down Beacon Street a short distance below, near the opposite corner, will be found the "CLUB-HOUSE," a fine residence, memorable for having been the headquarters of General Lafayette during his visit to Boston. Just beyond, on Beacon Street, is the

The best works of modern painters and sculptors adorn the walls of this fine gallery, which is well patronized by the lovers of the beautiful at all seasons of the year. Passing on, down Beacon, across Tremont (eastward), down through School Street, brings us to the great central thoroughfare of Boston, Washington Street. Turning to the left, just below the foot of School Street, on the right, we pass the fine new buildings and offices of the "BOSTON JOURNAL," the "EVENING TRANSCRIPT," the EASTERN, and HARNDEN'S EXPRESS; and, on the left, again, are seen the premises of the "DAILY HERALD." A few rods farther on, brings us to JOY'S Building, filled with lawyers' offices; in the rear of which is YOUNG'S famous "Cornhill Coffee-House," a fine restaurant, and very handsome lodging-house; and immediately opposite, we come to State Street, at the head of which stands

On the opposite side, north, is the "DAILY ADVERTISER" office. Passing this point into Congress Street, a few steps takes you to the publishing offices of the "BOSTON POST," and the "EVENING COURIER;" and a little further down, will be found the ever popular weeklies, "Flag of our Union," "American Union," and "Yankee Blade." The TREASURY is on the second floor over the Post-Office. The POST-OFFICE may be reached from State Street, and also from Congress Street. A "LADIES' Department," from which only letters addressed to the gentler sex are delivered, is, to females, a great convenience here. The building is a costly one, and the Exchange is one of the "institutions" of Boston. The Boston Custom-House.

This is another immense granite structure, erected by the United-States Government, and completed some fifteen years since, for the use and convenience of the United-States Sub-Treasurer, the Collector, Naval Officer, Surveyor, and subordinates of the "District of Boston and Charlestown." It is a large and imposing building, from the roof of which strangers can obtain a fine view of the harbor and bay in a clear day. Visitors to this building, which is worthy of examination, are uniformly treated with courtesy and attention by the officials there, — always provided that they are not in search of an appointment

These wharves are occupied with fine rows of granite and other wholesale stores in the shipping, wool, grocery, India, Chinese, West Indies, and other foreign trades; and from these wharves (as will be seen in our future pages), at stated times, fine STEAMERS sail for Portland, the British Provinces, and elsewhere, conveying passengers and freight. A long range of granite, running over five hundred feet from Merchants' Row (front) to Commercial Street (rear), flanked on either side by North and South Market Streets. This fine market (though deemed to some extent a "monopoly") is the best building for its uses in the United States; and, as a market-house where every thing desirable and seasonable is to be obtained, it has no equal, short of the noted good markets of Philadelphia. Over the whole, is a continuous hall, 520 feet long. The stranger in Boston will certainly not fail to take a walk through this Boston "institution." Directly opposite the front of this building, on Merchants' Row, stands our venerable "Cradle of Liberty" —

Faneuil Hall.

This structure occupies properly what is called "Faneuil-hall Square." Its front entrance, however, is upon Merchants' Row (east). This estate is built of brick, square in form, is surmounted by a low cupola, or spire, with a gilded grasshopper for a vane, and is lighted upon all sides from small but numerous windows. It was a gift from Peter Faneuil to the town of Boston, and is under the control of the City Government. The main hall contains some fine paintings and portraits of distinguished Americans, and is used for political gatherings, public meetings, occasional exhibitions, &c., while the lower story is now used for a market-house, — a rival for the "QUINCY," beyond. A short distance beyond these sites, passing on through Elm Street to Hanover, strangers will reach the American House. The widening of Hanover Street, with alterations and improvements made last year, place this Hotel on a par with any in the country. It contains a Passenger Elevator, with all the conveniences to be desired. Headquarters of the Boot, Shoe, and Leather Trade.

Brattle-Street Church,

An ancient edifice of brick, memorable in the Revolution. During the evacuation of Boston by the British troops, a cannon-ball, fired from our guns at Cambridge, chanced to strike the brick wall over the front doorway of this church, the "round shot" falling below, where it was secured the next day, and was afterwards placed in the wall, where it now remains a fixture. This fine old church has, at different times, been presided over by Hon. Edward Everett, Rev. Peter Thacher, &c., and latterly by Rev. S. K. Lathrop. In the rear of this church, on Brattle Street, is the City Hotel. Opposite, at the corner of Brattle Square (so called), is the

A moderate-priced and excellent hotel, which is always well filled with guests from the towns near and around Boston. Up Brattle Street, on the right, above the Quincy House, are located several very good "Restaurants for Ladies and Gentlemen" tarrying temporarily in town; and a short distance beyond, we arrive once more at our original starting-place, — "Scollay's Building," — near the head of Brattle, on Court Street and Tremont Row. Looking down Court Street now, from this point, on the right is the splendid ornamental, iron-front building of the

Adams Express Company.

These premises were purchased by this popular Company, early in 1865, for a quarter of a million of dollars; and the establishment was removed from its old and contracted quarters, formerly on Washington Street, to this spacious and admirable location on Court Street, where the lower rooms were at once remodelled, and arranged in excellent taste for the convenience of the immense business at present transacted by this well-known Express. Directly beyond this building, stands the Suffolk

County Court-House,

Still another granite square, in which are at present held the United-States, the State, County, City, Police, and Probate Courts. This structure is one hundred and eighty-five feet long, by about fifty feet wide, occupying the space between the two entrances of Court Square, out of Court Street. In the basement, is the City Lock-up, known as the "Tombs." In the rear of the Court House are the offices occupied by the Suffolk-County Register, and on the left (in Court Square), stands "Massachusetts Block" and "Barristers' Hall," two large brick buildings filled with lawyers' offices, the "Hancock House," &c.; while upon the lower floor of these ranges are found the Express Offices of Wells, Fargo & Co., Cheney & Co.,

An elegant edifice, built of Tuckahoe marble, white and gray, mixed together. It is of the Italian Gothic style, four stories besides basement, eighty feet high, and covers 11,000 feet of land, one hundred and fifty feet on Court, and fifty-five on Washington Street. It is occupied by Banks, Insurance offices, Treasurers of Corporations, and the Trustees of the Sears Estate. This is one of the most imposing edifices erected in the business portion of the city, and is a fitting monument to the memory of the man whose name it bears.

Returning again to Scollay's Building (where all the horse-cars centre on arriving at the end of their respective routes from Roxbury, Charlestown, &c.), we will now conduct the visiter westward. Leaving the horse-cars station, we pass along the "Tremont Row" of fine dry-goods, millinery, and other stores, to opposite the head of Hanover Street, where is established the splendid and spacious

An admirably conducted restaurant is one of its chief features; and its popularity is evident from the constant attendance of its thousands of visitors, from town and country, who crowd the pleasantly-decorated and superbly-appointed "Saloon," in the rear. Proceeding on through Tremont Row, we bear to the left, a few doors west of Copeland's, and enter Howard Street, where we may readily find the pretty, cosy, pleasant

"Howard Athenæum,"

The coolest theatre in summer, and one of the snuggest and warmest in winter, in Boston. The "Howard" is now in the full tide of success; and its boxes and seats are filled with discriminating audiences, who can appreciate good acting, and continuous effort to please. The management is at present in enterprising hands, and the production there of a constant succession of novelties entitles this establishment to its full share of popular favor. Passing around to Court Street again, and still westward, we shortly reach Bowdoin Square, on the right of which is the "Coolidge House," a massive granite hotel, and on the left, fronting the square, stands the famous Horse Railroad to Cambridge, &c.

The cars upon this branch of the "Union Company," run every few minutes, westward, to Cambridgeport, Cambridge Colleges, Mount Auburn, Prospect Street, North Cambridge, West Cambridge, Watertown, Brighton, Newton Corner, and East Cambridge, affording the visitor in Boston most excellent accommodations of transit to many points desirable to be seen at trifling cost, and small loss of time. The cars for East Cambridge pass from Bowdoin Square through Green and Leverett Streets, over Craigie's Bridge. Those running to the other points above named, pass through Cambridge Street, over Cambridge Bridge.

The West End, Jail, &c.

Among the points of interest at the westerly side of the city, distant half to three-quarters of a mile from Scollay's Building, is the Suffolk-County Jail, on Charles Street, north of Cambridge Street, fronting upon the water. This imposing granite structure is spacious and substantial, and has been occupied but a few years. It is octagonal in form, with wings like those of Charlestown Prison; both being upon the plan of the Auburn, N. Y., Prison. The buildings are fire-proof, being of stone, brick, and iron. This is quite a formidable institution, and is under very excellent interior management. Above this location, at the bottom of North Grove Street, is erected the

Massachusetts Medical College,

Capable of accommodating about 300 students, and is a sort of branch of "Harvard" College. It contains the fine "Warren Anatomical Cabinet," many excellent models, manikins, and other valuable surgical apparatus; and a valuable medical library belongs to the college. The "laboratory" is memorable as the spot where Dr. Webster (a former professor in Harvard University) had the fatal altercation with, resulting in the death of, Dr. Parkman of Boston. Just south of Cambridge Street, a few rods from the County Jail, is situated the

BOSTON.

Massachusetts General Hospital,

A large and fine structure of Chelmsford granite, very roomy, and embowered, within its large enclosure, with large trees, giving the whole premises an air of comfort and very agreeable appearance from without. Over one hundred patients can be accommodated here at a time. There are a few "free beds" (so called) for the unfortunate, who are not able to pay for being attended here; but as a rule the wards are occupied by those who have the means to defray the charges of the institution. Country applicants may apply in writing; other applications can be made, daily, in the morning, except in urgent cases of sudden accidents, &c., when patients are at once admitted. Visitors are not admitted inside, without special permits from the Trustees. Along the line from Cambridge Street to Leverett Street, upon the water side, great improvements have been made, latterly; and the "West End" can now boast of many fine houses and blocks erected within a few years, greatly enhancing the value of property there. The cars from

Chelsea, Charlestown, Malden, &c.,

Malden, South Malden, and Woodlawn. The Lynn horse-cars, via Chelsea Ferry, run every half hour, through Brattle, North, and Commercial Streets, Boston, to the city of Lynn, with a branch to Prattville.

South-Boston Horse-Cars.

The "Broadway Line" of horse-cars runs from Scollay's Building down Cornhill, up Washington Street, turning off at Essex Street, and passing through Beach, by the "WORCESTER" and "OLD COLONY" Railroads, both going and returning. These cars are all clearly labelled "SOUTH BOSTON," and "WORCESTER" or "OLD COLONY" Depot; and are a very convenient means of conveyance for persons, without heavy luggage, from other parts of the city, to these depots.

The United States Hotel,

Located on Beach Street, near the Worcester, Western, and Old Colony Railway Stations, is one of the largest and best hotels in Boston. Having been recently refurnished by its enterprising proprietors, the travelling public can find no better home while visiting the city.

but a short distance from Scollay's Building, and should not be overlooked by the lovers of good entertainment, at reasonable charges. From Court Street, northward, down Hanover, towards what is familiarly termed the "North End" of the city, the way is lined with dry-goods and fancy-goods stores, which are very liberally patronized, always, by strangers in Boston, from the fact, that, while the proprietors of these establishments keep up goodly assortments and qualities of their varied goods, their rents and current expenses are comparatively much less than are those of the more costly "up-town" stores; and they are thus able to sell their wares at such rates as always to draw crowds of patrons from abroad to this popular and busy "shopping" quarter. Strangers in Boston will therefore find it to their interest to indulge in a walk through Hanover Street.

The Old South Church, Milk Street,

Fronts on Washington Street, at the corner of Milk Street, and may be reached from our starting-place, down Court Street, turning to the right, up Washington Street. This famous old building has also a revolutionary history. The edifice is of brick, ample in dimensions, and its spire is one of the highest in the city. In this church the heroes of '76 held frequent meetings to confer upon the state of public affairs, and to discuss with earnest zeal the arrogance of British power. At one brief period, the interior of the "Old South" was converted into a riding-school for Burgoyne's troopers. In a house which formerly occupied the lot nearly opposite (on Milk Street), Ben Franklin is said to have been born; a fact which is inscribed upon the building now standing on this reputed birth-place of the philosopher. Whatever doubts may exist as to the status of this famous printer and statesman, the stranger will now find nearly opposite, on Washington Street — formerly "Milliken's" —

Music Hall,

The largest and finest concert-room in New England, in which has been placed (since 1863) the magnificent ORGAN, belonging to the "Music-hall Association," and which has been universally admired and extolled for its extraordinary power and excellence by visitors from every portion of the country, who have been so fortunate as to listen to its wondrous tones. In this hall, lectures and concerts are given from time to time, and its capacity is equal to the seating of a greater number of auditors, comfortably, than any building in Boston. The fine Church, until recently, standing in Winter Street, near by, has been taken down to make room for handsome stores now erecting upon that spot of ground. Returning down Winter Street and across Washington, we arrive in Passing down this street (from Washington) the stranger will find the "dry-goods palaces" of Hovey, Chandler, Fortune, Storms & Co., and others; the Mercantile Library Building, a splendidly appointed structure, with newspaper rooms, halls, &c.; the office of the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE COMPANY · Gleason's famous Publishing House.

The Mercantile Library Association.

Occupies the second floor in Mercantile Building, at the corner of Hawley and Summer Streets; the main entrance being from the latter. The rooms occupied by this Association are divided as follows, — Reading Room, Library, and Lecture Hall. The Library is one of the finest in the city: it contains at present 18,000 volumes. New books are constantly added, and in quantities to suit the demands of the members. In this library may be found many books which cannot be seen elsewhere, and which are not allowed to be taken from the library. The reading room is well stocked with daily and weekly newspapers, reviews, and periodicals; and comfortable arrangements have been made for reading.

Now — presto — change! The entire street is filled with these massive and costly wholesale stores, each of which, in the course of a single twelvemonth, transacts its business aggregate of a million, or millions of dollars. So we go! Up Franklin Street, now, to Washington, on the corner of which are the vaults of Pfaff Bro's, celebrated Lager-Bier establishment — and on,

If the traveller is weary, he can now avail himself of the horse-cars, which are constantly passing up Washington Street, towards Roxbury. Nearly opposite the head of Franklin Street, stands the MARLBORO' HOTEL, a good, quiet, well-kept temperance house, — always popular, and constantly well filled. Opposite this Hotel will be found the splendid store and clothing establishment of Macullar, Williams & Parker — the most elegant and expensively appointed warehouse, of its kind, in New England. The Boston Theatre,

The leading Temple of Thespis in the City of Nations, and one of the handsomest theatres in the world. It has not been so ; but the Boston Theatre, under its present conductors and management, is a success. At this elegant place of amusement (one of the amplest and prettiest theatres in the country), the "legitimate drama" is enacted, and the higher class of actors perform. The stage appointments are of the first order, the performances are the best, the audiences are made up of the fashion and élite of the city, and the place is nightly well filled with both residents and temporary visitors, who desire to witness the drama in its best attire, and under the most favorable circumstances. In the rear were formerly the rooms of the Boston Society of Natural History, now removed to new building on Berkeley Street. Adjoining the theatre is the "MELODEON," where religious services are held on the Sabbath ; in the morning by the "Parker Fraternity," and in the afternoon by the "Spiritualists." Still moving up Washington Street, we pass the

The Boston Young Men's Christian Association,

Which has occupied the whole front of Tremont Temple, up one flight, for seventeen years, is one of our most worthy public institutions. Its Free Reading Room is thoroughly good. This Association was organized December, 1851, and was the first association in the United States. Its present membership is 2,000. The total number of visits at these rooms in 1868, was over 140,000. There are 513 of these associations in the United States, with a membership of 70,000 young men. Eleven of these occupy buildings of their own, at a total value of $750,000. The Boston Association proposes erecting a building for its purposes, on Newton Street, at a cost of $250,000, during 1870. See further particulars, page

Selwyn's.

This Theatre was opened to the amusement public in October, 1867, and has at once acquired a pre-eminence which is not only creditable to its manager, but a source of pride to every New-Englander. For years the comparison "as good as Wallack's," applied to any entertainment, was equivalent to the highest praise; but now the dramatic standard is measured by Selwyn's, where every thing is done with an excellence which is beyond criticism. The Theatre is located on Washington Street, near Essex, and is one of the handsomest and coseyest houses in America. It can give seating accommodation to nearly seventeen hundred persons, and every seat in the house is good for sight and hearing. The Theatre is now the exclusive property of Arthur Cheney, Esq., one of our most enterprising and liberal young merchants, and is managed by Mr. J. H. Selwyn, whose fitness for his position has been proved in the unvarying and flattering success which has attended his efforts in catering for the Boston public. "Selwyn's" has become an institution; and no stranger should leave Boston until he has given himself the privilege of attending an entertainment at this house.

Fire-Alarm Telegraph.

This ingenious and admirable scientific invention for instantly transmitting intelligence of the existence of fire in any part of the city, to the police, firemen, and citizens generally, is now in successful operation. Should a fire break out near Brattle-square Church, where "telegraph signal-box No. 18" is located, for instance, the alarm will be given by the nearest police officer, or other person, upon the box there, and the announcement will be immediately made by all the large city bells striking ONE, then a pause, and then EIGHT — thus, 1-8 (the number of the box near the fire). Upon this information, all the firemen hasten, without “Boston, Hartford, and Erie” Railroad Depot.

At the foot of Summer Street is the Station, just completed, of the “Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad Company.” This road will shortly be opened to Mechanicsville (on the Norwich & Worcester Road), and to Southbridge, Massachusetts. During 1869, will be completed a large part of the work between Mechanicsville and Willimantic, twenty-six miles, a connecting link between the property of the company in this State and that owned by it in Rhode Island and Connecticut, heretofore known as the “Hartford, Providence, & Fishkill Railroad.” When completed to Willimantic, this will open a new and shorter route, viâ Hartford, to New York. But by merging of the franchise of New-York and Boston Railroad Company with the Boston, Hartford, and Erie, the "Air-Line" route to New York will be adopted by the latter Company. This will be accomplished by extending the line from Willimantic (viâ Middletown) to New Haven, thus furnishing a route one hour shorter than by any other line between the two great cities.

Boston "Neck."

The casual visitor in Boston, who has followed the directions of the "NEW GUIDE," in "seeing the sights" already pointed out, will have travelled quite as far on foot as will prove comfortable. We therefore propose that he now enter one of the Washington Street horse-cars or omnibusses, and we will move briskly up Washington Street or Harrison Avenue, as you please, out upon the "NECK" — the southerly portion of the city. A quarter of a mile above Dover Street, we come to BLACKSTONE and FRANKLIN SQUARES (one on each side of this broad avenue), open grassed lots, of generous dimensions, flanked by fine rows of handsome private dwellings, each square being surrounded by a handsome iron fence, and ornamented by a large fountain (supplied by the Cochituate water) in the centre. Above these fine squares, a third of a mile farther on, we reach the Washington Cemetery, with its high granite wall, fronting on the street.

The "Neck" is a paved avenue, one hundred feet wide; and there have already been built, along its entire length, numerous modern brick and stone-front dwellings, both costly and elegant; while upon the "made land," on either side, have also sprung up hundreds of houses and blocks — forming several new streets — now entirely occupied by first-class private residences, and transforming the "South End" of Boston from the unsightly and barren waste that it was, only a few years ago, into the most orderly, healthy, and desirable portion of the city, at present, in which to reside. On the right of the Neck, across Shawmut Avenue, run several very handsome new streets, westward, on which are located pretty open squares, as "Chester Park," "Union Park," "Worcester Square," &c., surrounded by substantial residences, and occupied by many leading residents of Boston. Having now reached the outskirts, we will recommend briefly

The Suburbs of Boston.

BOSTON HIGHLANDS are two and a half miles from the centre of Boston. It can be reached by the horse-cars, as we have already stated (as can any of the cities or towns immediatly adjoining Boston); but, if the stranger will take a livery carriage, he will much better enjoy a drive through the suburbs. We will pass up Washington Street, and, just over the "line," turn off at the burial-ground, into Eustis Street. Thence, over Mount Pleasant (towards Dorchester), the roads are smooth and even, and the eye is continuously greeted with beautiful residences and cottages, with their tasteful gardens, greenhouses, borders, and flower-plats.

Passing over "Mount Pleasant," to the right, a few rods from Dorchester Brook, may be seen the once elegant gardens of the late Hon. Samuel Walker, an old resident there, who, in a long life of general usefulness, exhibited a fine taste and a deep love for the beautiful in horticulture and floriculture. A short distance farther on, and just at the Dorchester "line," upon Eustis Street, are the spacious grounds and the aristocratic pile known as the

Gov. Eustis Estate.

This fine old place was the former residence of Governor Eustis, and was occupied by his venerable and universally respected consort until her recent decease in 1865. This stately building was erected by Colonial Governor Shirley, in 1743, and was at that early period considered a very superior mansion. Its frame of oak was imported from England. General Washington made the Eustis House his temporary headquarters on his first arrival in Boston. General Lafayette was also a guest of Governor Eustis (the occupant after Governor Shirley); and Hon. Daniel Webster, and other distinguished civilians, have at times enjoyed the hospitality of this ancient family. Of late years the premises have been neglected, and are now out of repair; but the house is a fine one, and with its extensive grounds reminds the visitor of the "good old times" in our local history.

Along the road to "Dorchester Corners" are several magnificent dwellings and expensive villas, a view of which will well repay the trouble of this trip. We can only glance at these lovely places, as we move on; for we must turn abruptly to the right, and ride westward, by finely cultivated estates, over a quiet but still excellent road, past more pretty rural residences, and over a cross-way, still south-west, when we shall come in view of Forest-Hills Cemetery.

We have ridden round about to get here; but we are fully compensated by the enjoyment we have experienced. There are other routes hither (viâ Warren Street, or by Brush-hill Turnpike), but we prefer the road we have chosen. And here we are, at the entrance of this lovely retreat and quiet "home for the departed," having entered the wide smooth avenue leading to the cemetery from the westerly approach. The gateway is formidable, at least one hundred and fifty feet in width, and we pass under the grand portico of Egyptian architecture, and are within the limits of these beautifully planned and decorated grounds. The cemetery is laid out with wide walks and avenues, running through and around and over vale or dell or hill, in the most artistic and picturesque style; and its rare natural scenery, worked up as it now is by the aid of art and good taste, renders this spot one of the loveliest, for its purposes, yet fashioned or improved by nature, or the hand of man. But the stranger must see their beauties with his own eyes to appreciate them. We leave this lovely place, with its rich and costly monuments, its placid lakes and shadowy groves, its stately trees and velvety lawns, its birds and blossoms, its rocks and its bowers, and turn down the wide avenue that leads away toward "Grove Hall," a fine old place, surrounded by a heavy grove of ancient trees, and formerly quite a public resort, but at present in private hands; and thence northward, over a granite-finished road, toward the centre and westerly portion of Roxbury. Reaching Dudley Street, we ascend the hill to the Norfolk House, a popular and handsome hotel and boarding-place, and continue on through Centre Street, over "Hog Bridge," pass the "Laboratory," still up a mile and a half from Norfolk Hill, to Jamaica Plain.

This place is now a goodly town, built up within a few years, though there are many superb old estates upon the "Plain," and around the "Pond." From the latter, for many years, a portion of Boston was supplied with water, by the "Jamaica-Pond Aqueduct Company," the water being brought into the city through wooden tubes. The pond itself is very pretty, but not a large one, and its banks are skirted with some of the most costly and elegant cottages and villas in New England. In the winter season, this spot is a popular skating-ground for young ladies and gentlemen from the city, who gather in great numbers here to enjoy this recently declared "fashionable" amusement of both sexes. We ride entirely round the pond, and a most enjoyable ride it is, too, and come out by the western streets into

Still passing over splendid roads (for which, by the way, the vicinity of Boston is so justly famous), and crossing again still westward, we proceed through what was formerly the neighborhood of the "Punch-bowl" (now happily extinct)! and less than a mile brings us to the exquisite little village of Longwood, a portion of Brookline, with its magnificent villas, its tasteful modern houses, its pretty stone cottages, its massive woodbine-covered churches, and cleanly kept streets, its gardens and terraces and lawns. Through Longwood, out upon the rear, and west again, we strike

The Road to Brighton.

Fatigued? Ah, no! You surely will not tire with this varied scenery; never weary, unless you are a denizen. So, forward! Your horse even enjoys this capital road. And "here they go, there they go!" There's a pair of dashing chestnuts for you. Flyers? To be sure they are; but this is the route, in summer or winter, to meet the gentleman with his "two-thirty" nag, or "three-minute" pair, at any hour of a pleasant afternoon. Our pony is more staid and quiet, however; and we will jog along, and look on only at the sport. Up, over the hill, by the fine farms and handsome residences, again, — on, two miles or less, brings us to Wilson's, and "Cattle-fair Hotel," where we will water our horse, and rest a moment. Thence, turning to the left near this fine house, we cross, upon as good a road as ever, by Winship's Gardens, and two and a half miles farther on brings us into

Old Cambridge,

With its time-honored institution of learning, Harvard College, and its renowned revolutionary associations. We pass Gore Hall, University Hall, Divinity Hall, and the brick quarters of the students; admire the beauty and grandeur of the modern buildings, and smile at the quaint and homely style of the old ones, and inwardly thank the original donor of this fine property, of whom it is narrated, "it pleased God to stir up the heart of one Mr. Harvard (a godly gentleman and lover of learning) to give up one-half of his estate toward the erection of a college" — for the gratification we enjoy in looking upon this beautiful seat of education, and its superb surroundings. On, again, by the famous "Washington Elm," underneath whose shadow it is said George Washington first drew his sword in the Revolution; by the "Brattle House," beyond the village, but still among elegant country seats, fine old dwellings, rich farms and gardens, past the "Headquarters of Washington," now occupied by the poet, Longfellow; on, a mile and a quarter, to

"Mount Auburn," Watertown.

This extensive and magnificent cemetery is noted as one of the leading objects of its kind in this country, and it must be visited to be in anywise appreciated. It is about five miles from Scollay's Building, and is the property of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. It contains about a hundred acres of land, which is laid out in the most tasteful manner, and, with its lakes and hills, its mountains and dells, its noble trees, bold eminences, shady valleys, and variety of roads and paths, dotted all around with costly monuments of every conceivable design, its superb Gate- way, its grateful Pump House, its massive and classic Chapel, its grand Tower (on the summit of the "mount"), from which a rare view of the surrounding country can be enjoyed; its splendid "enclosures," and general location, as a whole, "MOUNT AUBURN" has long been acknowledged one of the finest cemeteries in America. No stranger will fail to visit this spot, the beauties of which must be seen to be realized. If you so desire, a ride of a quarter of a mile down "Pond Street," opposite Mount Auburn, will introduce you to our famous

A large sheet of water, surrounded by a splendid old forest, and at which there is a good hotel, much frequented by both citizens and strangers during the greater part of the year. If you choose to ride a mile or so farther into Watertown, you will still find only the most excellent of roads, and can have an opportunity to see the magnificent residences of that neighborhood, among the finest of which are the John P. Cushing place; the palatial mansion and fair grounds of Alvin Adams; the Pratt estate, and numerous others of simular beauty and costliness. After this, returning by Mount Auburn and Old Harvard, we may cross in front of the Colleges, and enjoy a superb drive over the long, clean, wide avenue that leads directly to Zach. West Cambridge,

One of the places not to be omitted in our sketch of the drives about Boston. The road leading to and beyond this famous hotel, from College Square, is a broad level way, always kept in perfect repair, and along its entire length are erected some of the most costly and elegant suburban residences in America. In the immediate vicinity are the Cambridge Trotting Park (a nicely planned and well-conducted race-track), "Spy Pond," and the Spy-Pond Hotel (places much frequented in former years); and the fine farms, handsome estates, substantial mansions, and elaborate cottages that line the way, in all directions, here, render the ride over this road one of the most popular in this region of country, in summer or winter. If the visitor have the leisure, he may continue on upon this road (or he can go thither by Fitchburg Railroad from Boston) to Lexington, eleven miles from the city, and Concord (six miles farther), — both historic places, with their revolutionary traditions and memories, their MONUMENTS to the brave and stubborn resistants to British aggression, with their lovely environs. But, for the present, retracing our steps to the Colleges once more, and taking any one of the splendid streets of Cambridge, leading eastward, lined as they are all the way, on both sides, with more elegant villas, more pleasant cottages, more fine mansions, and more expensive dwellings, we may halt a moment at Hovey's beautiful gardens, en route into Cambridgeport; thence, down to and across old Cambridge Bridge, and arrive again in Boston.

To Riverside Trotting Park, &c.

A very pleasant and popular drive on a summer afternoon is that from Boston, over Western Avenue (Mill Dam), through Longwood Village, to Brighton, or Brookline and Newton. "Riverside Trotting Park," about three miles from town, can be reached via the Western Avenue, over a smooth, even, and beautiful road. The Brighton horse-cars also take passengers direct to the Track, running from the Boston station during the day at brief intervals. In the winter season, when the ground is covered with snow, this route, through parts of Roxbury and Brookline, is the fashionable drive to Brighton and Watertown; and the "sleighing carnival" is enjoyed by all classes there with intense gusto in fine winter weather.

South Boston,

Which is readily reached in the horse-cars, has its attractions also. The "Heights of Dorchester" may still be seen, the spot held by Washington, in 1776, on the night of March 4, where preparations were made to receive an expected battle with the British, but which did not occur; the "red-coats" suddenly departing for New York without showing fight. The fine Perkins Institute is here, the Asylum for the Blind; at which

City of Charlestown,

Whither the horse-cars run every few minutes throughout the day. This place is connected with Boston by the (old) Charlestown and the (new) Warren Bridges. A leading object of interest here is Bunker Hill, with its famous "MONUMENT," of solid Quincy granite, 220 feet in height. An inside spiral flight of steps from the base leads up to the top of this mighty shaft, and from its elevated apex, in a clear day, a splendid view of Boston and vicinity can be had. This monument was dedicated June 17, 1843, in the presence of President Tyler and his Cabinet, when Hon. Daniel Webster delivered the famous oration for the occasion. The monument stands upon the centre of the site occupied by the redoubt, on Breed's Hill, and is another of the "institutions" of old Massachusetts. After descending from the "dizzy height" of this grand obelisk, a brief walk brings us to makers, or captured from time to time from the enemy, its pyramids of cannon-balls, its massive docks, its work-shops and barracks, its officers'-quarters and handsome dwellings, its engine-rooms and ropewalks (quarter of a mile in length), and its machinery; and, above all, the perfect cleanliness and order observed in all things, will greatly interest the visitor who can pass an hour or two within its limits. On the westerly side of the city of Charlestown, the rear resting upon Charles River, stands the

Massachusetts State Prison,

A penal institution, which, under the admirable supervision and management of its present excellent warden, Hon. Gideon Haynes, has attained a high character for usefulness and discipline, as well as for its purposes of confinement of the unfortunate or wicked criminals who are committed within its walls. The buildings are of stone, are spacious, and well ventilated, the principal one being in the form of a +, having a central octagonal tower, running higher up, considerably, than the four wings. A visit to this prison will inform the stranger how well affairs are managed there, and the time spent in examining the details of the conduct of this institution will be passed profitably and agreeably. In the graveyard, near the prison, is JOHN HARVARD'S monument, placed there by graduates of Harvard University. It is a plain shaft, without pretensions to beauty. Leaving Charlestown at this

Somerville,

Where we shall find the McLean Asylum, for the insane, a group of spacious brick buildings, about a mile and a quarter distant from Boston. The structures occupy an elevated spot, deemed healthy and comfortable as a place of residence. The male and female patients are separated entirely from each other. The price of board (at lowest) is fixed at three dollars. The friends of patients possessed of means pay higher rates. It is a well-conducted institution, and has proved in every way successful. Returning to Boston by cars again, we can now, if we please, drive out over Craigie's Bridge, through East Cambridge, across to Charlestown Neck, and thence up to the "dike," passing the ruins of "Ursuline Convent" (burned many years ago), over the causeway, •

A pretty place, four miles from town, remarkable only for its handsome village, through which the Mystic River flows, the fine old patriarchal family residences of the Brookses, the Macombs, &c., &c., and for its handsome central church, so long presided over, until 1862, by the poet and scholar, Rev. John Pierpont. Leaving Medford, and passing eastward and north-

Spot Pond, Stoneham.

This is a magnificent sheet of water, six miles from town, whose level is some eighty feet above the surrounding country, — a basin in the hills that flank the beautiful town of Melrose. The pond is dotted with islets, and along the easterly side are several large rough-stone mansions of great beauty and high cost. Along the road we now pass over, these fine estates are seen to advantage; and as we enter the old forest on the easterly side of the pond, and turn eastward, we come upon

Just below Spot Pond, one of the quietest and most enchanting spots in all New England, but one that is as yet but little known. The vast old pines along this road stretch their umbrageous limbs entirely across the path overhead, and the forest through which we drive into Melrose, and out upon the "Ravine Road" (so called) below, is seemingly primeval in its growth. The passage through the cool shadow of this dense grove, or forest, is very grateful to the senses, and should be oftener enjoyed by the lovers of "Nature in her wilder mood," who may have the opportunity so to do. Thence, down the quiet, hill-flanked "ravine" road, through Melrose, across the Boston and Woodlawn Cemetery.

If the stranger will start afresh with us, once more, the "NEW GUIDE" will take him in its Goddard wagon over Charlestown Bridge, through Chelsea, to Woodlawn Cemetery. The "NEW GUIDE's" horse is an "old pelter" upon these roads, and was purchased years ago as "sound and kind, afraid of nothing." But, old as he is, and kind as he is, he dislikes the "dummy engine" upon the Lynn horse-car track; and so he willingly turns aside (Saugus-ward) over Washington Avenue, a well-worn and level road; and a pleasant drive of four miles or so brings us to the gateway of the cemetery. (The reader can go from Boston in the horse-car if he prefer it.) We have passed up Woodlawn Avenue, and find the gate-house, a pretty Gothic structure, fifty feet in width, arched over in the centre, and again on the sides. It is a beautiful enclosure, kept in admirable condition, and contains many objects of interest to the visitor. Among them are the Rock Tower, built of rough stones, thirty feet high, from the top of which a fine view is obtained. A handsome pond, with fountains, lofty trees around it, and a neat arbor, graces the central portion. Chapel Hill, Elm Hill, Netherwood Avenue, &c., are lovely spots in this calm and rural place, which daily grows more and more beautiful, and where the stranger will find many a quiet nook in which he would be content to sleep, when "the dread summons comes," that causes all, sooner or later, to shuffle off this mortal coil. After an agreeable and instructive stroll through the avenues and paths of these sacred grounds, we cross eastward, if inclined, and half a mile further brings us to the open sea-shore, on

Chelsea Beach,

Where there are four good hotels, in a range of about a mile, at either of which your horse will be well cared for, and you can yourself enjoy the ready fish dinner or supper with excellent gusto. At low tide, a fine ride up and down the beach will prove highly beneficial to your health and spirits; and after listening an hour to Old Ocean's roar, you may return to town with the consciousness of having enjoyed one of the pleasantest drives accessible around Boston, or elsewhere. By crossing over to the turnpike, a pleasant ride of a few miles farther northward, through handsome villages, and past many a cosy estate, brings us to Swampscott, upon the seashore,—a pretty and tastefully laid out place, dotted with fine dwellings, cottages, or villas, occupied in part as summer residences by wealthy business men of Boston, and by families transiently during "the heated term." The sea-air at this point, and at Phillips' Beach, near by,

is highly invigorating and healthful in the warm season. Another place of resort in this direction must not be forgotten, to wit:—

Point Shirley.

This place is located on the outer point of land, east of Chelsea, upon the edge of what is called the “gut,” a narrow but deep channel in Boston harbor, directly abreast of Deer Island. The single hotel there is admirably kept by O. A. Taft, who maintains a most excellent house, and who understands his profession thoroughly. He will provide you with a better game or fish dinner, on any summer day, than can be obtained elsewhere in this State; and his place can be reached through Chelsea, by the river road, in the omnibus from Maverick Square, or by private conveyance over as fine a path as leads from Boston, six miles, in any direction. Returning from either of the last-described points, through Chelsea, the stranger may be edified if he visits the U. S. HOSPITAL, in the latter city. A drive, via Chelsea and Lynn,

To Nahant,

Was, in former years, a desideratum to the stranger in Boston. The fine large hotel upon the outer point of the peninsula was destroyed by fire, however, a few years since; and though the summer steamer plies thither now, as of yore, the chief attraction is wanting; the land has fallen into private hands, and visitors to Nahant must now "circulate" around the village "promiscuously." Still, there are many objects of note to be seen there, outside of the "private grounds" now fenced across at the outer point, and a splendid drive still remains, as of old, adown "Long Beach" and back. The ancient glory of "Nahant" proper has pretty much departed, however.

Boston and New York "Shore Line Railway."

The depôt of this popular line to New York is at the foot of the Common, Providence Depôt Building. This short and quick route possesses a great advantage over the INTERIOR LINES, being free from dust at all seasons, and passing along the edge of the sound, passengers enjoy the fine continual sea-breeze, from Providence to New York City. Two express trains leave the depôt as above, from Boston, daily, at 11.10, A. M., and 8.30, P. M. The Sunday-night mail leaves at 6.30, P. M. Returning trains leave New York Depôt, corner of 27th Street and 4th Avenue, at 12.15, noon, and 8, P. M.; and the Sunday night express mail at 5, P. M. This is the only line carrying the GREAT SOUTHERN NIGHT U. S. MAIL. The splendid sleeping-cars on the NIGHT trains, and magnificent modern cars on the DAY trains, of this line are especially commended to travellers in quest

With its numerous handsome islands, is a pleasant point to visit, in the proper season, for a day's sail and fishing, to those who enjoy this sort of pleasure. Excursion steamers run down to the outer light, and among these islands, daily, in summer time; and the trip is very enjoyable, and not expensive. Fort Warren, the "Farm School" on Thompson's Island, House of Industry on Deer Island, the Hospital on Rainsford Island, Fort Independence, Fort Winthrop, Governor's Island, Galloupe's Island (recently the rendezvous for enlisted troops), the light-houses, Minot's Ledge Light, the Brewsters, Nix's Mate, &c., &c., are all objects of interest to be seen during the day's voyage; and, returning once more to the city, — the "NEW GUIDE" has no limits, at present, to enter into farther details.

It is believed that in this little work, nevertheless, a larger amount of information is already given than can be found crowded into any former "GUIDE" published; and it is also believed that in these pages will be found all the general information that strangers in Boston need, to find their way around and through the city.

Washingtonian Home.

This most excellent institution was established in Boston, and located in Charles Street, about seven years ago, but was subsequently removed to 877 Washington Street, where it is at present in operation. It is a reformatory establishment for unfortunate inebriates, to hundreds of whom it has proved a home indeed. To many families, through the influence of this institution, husbands or fathers or sons have been happily restored, after a brief residence under the guidance and control of its worthy managers. The late Joshua Bennett of this city left in his will provision for donating the sum of $25,000 to the HOME, which sum was recently paid over to the Directors by Mr. Bennett's two daughters and heirs, and which will prove a timely addition to the funds of the corporation.

Statue of Hamilton.

The handsome granite statue of Alexander Hamilton, standing upon the square in Commonwealth Avenue (below the Public Garden), was executed at a cost of some twenty thousand dollars, and was the free gift of Thomas Lee, Esq., to the City of Boston in 1865. This monument is a fine ornament to this splendid broad avenue, and as a work of art will be appreciated by all good judges.

Lunatic Hospital, Winthrop.

The Boston Board of Directors of Public Institutions, after having had under consideration for some time the establishment of a Lunatic Asylum in Suffolk County, in Nov. 1865 selected a site for this institution in the town of Winthrop, and secured a bond of the farm of about a hundred and sixty acres, with certain privileges to the beach contiguous to the land, at about $150 per acre. A horse-railroad has been chartered to run past the farm, and it is in contemplation to erect suitable buildings for the purposes desired at an early day.

Masonic Hall, Cambridgeport.

A handsome and substantial granite structure, built of the materials of the old "Custom-house Block," until recently standing at the lower end of Long Wharf, and which were removed for the purpose in 1865, has been erected and finished in 1866 by J. W. Seaver for a Masonic Hall, in Main Street, Cambridgeport. The front is a hundred and fifty feet by fifty feet in depth, and the building is surmounted by a French roof. This is a great improvement to that portion of the city where it is located. It was dedicated to Masonic purposes in January, 1866.

PRESERVE THE TEETH.

Microscopical examinations by Dr. H. I. Bowditch, of the matter deposited on the teeth, have proved that those only who use soap as a dentifrice were free from accumulations of animal and vegetable parasites upon the teeth and gums. The addition of Camphor strengthens and relieves soreness of the gums and teeth, and maintains them constantly in a healthy state. Used daily, as a preventive for the toothache, it is invaluable.

Loss of Teeth.—The teeth often fall out without apparent cause. It is occasioned frequently by the use of charcoal and imperfectly powdered substances, which make the gums recede from the teeth, thus prolonging the trouble. "Brown's Camphorated Saponaceous Dentifrice" has been in use several years, and universally approved.

Decayed Teeth are often caused by the use of imperfectly powdered charcoal and gritty substances. THE BEST article for cleansing and whitening the teeth, and correcting the breath, is "Brown's Camphorated Saponaceous Dentifrice."

Exceedingly Effective.—"Brown's Camphorated Saponaceous Dentifrice" will be found effectual in removing the accumulation of tartar from the teeth, which by neglect causes decay and toothache. It cleans and whitens the teeth, corrects the breath, and keeps the teeth and gums in a healthy condition.

For cleansing and whitening the teeth, and correcting the breath, it is THE BEST. Obtain only
